For one day only, you have 14 hours to vote for your favorite drink in this competition. The competition is open to all people, and the winner will receive a $100 gift card to a local restaurant. Can't wait to see who wins!

Kathleen Falk
Law Clerk

In such a budget I prioritized public safety, adding 85 new deputies, crack-downs on Internet predators, and combating other abuse. I fought for better penalties for sexual predators, for justice for victims and families and for victims of crime. I worked with Democrats and Republicans to pass the courts reform that I fought for so long.

I have campaigned for more than 25 years — different positions over time — but my core values have never changed. I have made some mistakes along the way and some who have disagreed with my positions. But I am a wiser, hopefully, with age. I have learned from experience and have become a more effective public servant. I have spent my life putting the law to work for the people of Wisconsin and a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the position of Wisconsin Attorney General.

Dear Editor: Joel McNally's Sept. 2 column on Plan B presents false information about the use of this contraceptive. He therefore misses the entire point of our opposition to this pill. The patient package insert of every birth control pill warns that the pills can abort human beings if used as abortives. He continues to do a good job in keeping our state's environmental watchdog.

Promises made as candidate have been promises kept.

As AG, I will shift funds to meet most pressing needs.

Scott Vogt has several good ideas, but a partisan elected official running on election issues does not mean he has the votes to turn things around.

Dear Editor: Fortune for all of us is a new title for a great candidate in Dane County who writes for the Wisconsin State Journal. David Lautenschlager.

Dear Editor: Dave has 26 years of law enforcement and management experience, including over 20 years as an FBI agent. He is a veteran state and federal law enforcement officer. He knows the law, understands the law, has the skills and experience to manage and solve problems — young people joining gangs and intervening in our communities to prevent crime in our communities.

Falk's political moves are cold

Falk was born in Las Vegas and raised in Chicago. He obtained a bachelor's degree in political science from the University of Chicago and a law degree from the University of Chicago Law School. He joined the Illinois State Police in 1988 and spent 15 years with the agency before leaving to work for the Illinois Secretary of State's office. In 2003, he was appointed as the state's attorney general by then-Governor Rod Blagojevich. After Blagojevich was removed from office in 2009, Falk continued to serve as attorney general until 2011.

In 2011, Falk ran for governor of Illinois but lost in the primary to then-state Rep. Pat Quinn. After Quinn's unexpected death in 2015, Falk was appointed to fill the remaining two years of Quinn's term and was later elected to a full term in 2016. In 2018, he ran for re-election but lost to J.B. Pritzker.

Falk has been a controversial figure in Illinois politics, facing criticism for his handling of high-profile cases like the Jussie Smollett case.

As attorney general, Falk has faced scrutiny over his handling of the Jussie Smollett case, in which Smollett falsely claimed he was the victim of a racist and homophobic attack.

Falk has also been criticized for his role in the LaSalle Correctional Center in Edgerton, where a series of sexual assaults were reported.

In 2019, Falk announced his candidacy for governor of Illinois in 2020, but he withdrew from the race in February 2020 after a series of controversies and poor polling results.